British Artillery in the Battle of the Aisne

This photograph of British artillery in the battle of the Aisne, which experts are beginning to say will go down as the most stupendous military operation in history, shows the difficulties under which the enemy labors at times, in trying to locate guns. After the discharge of these great engines columns of smoke arise, obscuring the line of vision, and it is very hard to make a target of them so as to use the guns.

GERMAN RIGHT HOLDS AGAINST ALLIES BLOW

Confidence Prevails in London and Paris But Allies
Were Surprised by Success of Germans Against Charge

RUSSIANS PLAN TO INVADE PRUSSIA

Great Britain Investigating Coal Shipments Originating in United States Under Suspicion That Many Cargoes do Not Reach

Ports to Which Consigned but German
Cruisers Who Are Awaiting Them

By Associated Press.

LONDON, October 5.—General von Kluck, reinforced from the German center, continues to make a determined stand against all of the efforts of the Allies to outflank him.

General French, who yesterday announced that all of the German attacks in this region have been repulsed, and that the Allies have resumed the offensive, today reported the battle north of the Oise, which has been in progress since September 25, continues with great violence, and without any decisive results, though the French have been forced to yield ground in some places.

The German official report last night says the battle is progressing favorably for them.

The greatest confidence prevails in Paris and London, although surprise is expressed at the success of the Germans in preventing the outflanking movement. They feel, however, that the Germans can not extend their line much further north without weakening it.

Along the rest of the line the French communication says there is not much change. They are either satisfied with the progress made in the Woerw region or have been checked by the Germans. The Germans claim a victory at this point.

The progress at this point is necessarily slow on account of the entrenchments of both sides.

The defeat of the German army invading Russia from East Prussia appears to be much more complete than was first reported, according to the Russians. It is said they lost 70,000 men and were forced to abandon everything. The Russians are now preparing to again invade Prussia. The battle of Augustovo seems to have been a Russian victory.

There is no news today from Slesian or Galician battle fields and it is probable that the main armies have not yet met. A big battle is imminent. The Galician peasants are fleeing before the Russian advance, twenty thousand of whom have reached Bohemia.

At Antwerp the official report says the situation is unchanged. Fighting continues in the Near East, the French fleet is destroying Lustica, the outer defense of Cattaro, the main Austrian seaport.

The Servians and Montenegrins are still attacking Sarajevo and all is quiet at Belgrade.

Skirmishes have occurred on the Anglo-German frontiers in East Africa which the British say have all been repulsed.

The British government has commandeered great quantities of clothing in Leicester to clothe the army. Similar steps are expected elsewhere.

Great Britain is investigating coal shipments which have been made from the United States, under the suspicion that the cargoes do not reach the ports to which they were consigned but reach German warships at sea.

The Prince of Wales relief fund has now reached the sum of fifteen millions.

A Reuter's dispatch from Petrograd to the London Dispatch, says that details have been published there of the Russians crossing the Carpathians which are almost impregnable.

General Jean Rousseau of the French cavalry, died today from wounds.

The audacious espionage of the Germans has caused the staff of the Allies to deal severely with strangers found within the lines. Five German officers are said to have been found near the firing line, disguised in French uniforms.

ALLIES SURPRISED BY GERMANS

By Associated Press.

AT BATTLE FRONT, October 5.—The Allied armies, after they thought they had allowed the Germans to exhaust themselves, today took a most vigorous offensive. They encountered strong resistance, however, and most of the detachments of the western wing were compelled to fall back. Only at this point were the troops in close contact.

Many of the picturesque villages were badly damaged by the fighting. The country is flat, cultivated, boggy and filled with numerous coal mines. The rapid manner in which the French changed positions is remarkable. Two divisions marched thirty miles Sunday and twenty-eight Saturday. The German aviators, however, discovered the movement and the Germans brought up reinforcements to meet them. The Germans were inside the circle and were able to reach the appointed place by shorter marches.

PARIS SAYS SITUATION STATIONARY

By Associated Press.

PARIS, October 5.—Tonight's official communication says: "The general situation is stationary. On our left wing the action continues. In the region of Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse we have repulsed day and night attacks."

General Grand Duke Nicholas has sent a telegram to General Joffre, announcing a victory at Augustovo and General Joffre has sent congratulations.
